Want to get input on a new company logo or mascot? How about looking at a seating plan for a meeting, studying the layout of your new office building, or even marketing new equipment? Then this 3D option is for you!

A 3D object can be placed into a PDF document, then all the recipient of your email has to do is click on the object and they can rotate it in real time 3D!

Not only that, but they can zoom in, zoom out, look at details, preview a simple line drawing to show hidden views, and so much more. We can work with your existing CAD files, or we can model and export your designs for you.

We can easily stream your existing video, or provide you with a completely new one and help you place it into a document like this one.

By simply clicking on the link, viewers are taken to a secure server site where they can then view the material at their convenience without having to clog up their email inbox.

If you require interactivity, we can work with your in-house IT group to provide a smooth transition to your web page.

Consistency, economy, and simplicity, all at the click of a mouse.

Let's face it, not everyone wants to know exactly what makes a particular product or service work, but for those that do, why not provide a direct link to additional documentation? Allow readers to "drill down" for specific information, answers to their questions, or to put them in direct contact with your sales/marketing department.

Imagine all the power of your database, web page, or company directory, all within one simple, e-mailable PDF file.
